LETTER FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Nature is a fundamental right of every New Yorker. At New York Restoration Project, we believe everyone deserves access to clean, safe and beautiful public green space. Since our founding in 1995 by Bette Midler, we have been partnering with high need communities to take back public space by picking up trash, planting trees, and renovating parks and gardens. Working together, neighbors become neighborhoods, and our city is safer, happier, and healthier for everyone. Your support makes that possible.

Across all five boroughs, in our city’s most dense, least green, highest need communities, we see the results of our commitment to environmental justice every day. A family of five living in an 850 square foot apartment gets the space to throw a birthday barbeque in a beautiful garden. A grandmother grows fresh vegetables for her family’s table. There is justice when a 10-year-old touches soil for the first time and squeals with delight at a worm, or when a single mom lets her kids run around freely, knowing they’re safe and she can rest. There is a generation spanning connection for a teenage high school dropout when she learns to plant seeds from her elderly neighbor on a sunny summer day. When these neighbors come together, there’s justice in the strong ties they forge and collective actions they take as a community that accepts responsibility and caretaking for a shared green space.

This is what we hear from the growing community directly impacted by your support:

This garden is everyone’s second home. People play dominos, kids have birthday parties, and the whole community enjoys having coffee and spending afternoons here.
– Jose Reyes, El Cataño Garden, East Harlem

Most of our students have been traumatized physically and mentally. They’ve been in the foster care system. Some of them are homeless, or have been homeless. For a lot of my young people there are very few places they have to physically go. NYRP gardens are a refuge from the turmoil in their lives.
– Heather Butts, Co-Founder/Executive Director, H.E.A.L.T.H for Youths

This past growing season we grew, harvested, and donated over 1,000 pounds of organic and nutritionally dense veggies and herbs to our local community of West Brighton. We established a relationship with a Senior Center where our produce was cooked and served to the seniors in a day program.
– Kim Cohen, West Brighton Community Member

What we grow here is always better because it’s fresh and free of chemicals. It’s organic, so it is 100% better than in the grocery store.
– Elvia Campos, Clinton Avenue Garden, East Tremont
Two thousand and seventeen was an exciting year for NYRP. We opened gorgeous new community gardens in low-income neighborhoods across the city and in other open spaces where neighbors asked for our help—schoolyards, senior centers, public housing developments, and community centers. We advanced the design of what will be the South Bronx’s first waterfront open space, a street-end pier park as part of the Haven Project. We educated more than 10,000 K-8th grade students about nature, nutrition, and urban ecosystems; moved hundreds of people outside to exercise through our fitness classes; brought together 5,000 neighbors at our arts and culture events that included dance, movie nights, and theatre; and helped neighborhood resident gardeners grow 89,000 pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables to feed their families and friends. We held 20 Tree Giveaway events giving away an average of 250 trees at each event, totaling 5,000 new trees planted on private land. We completed more than 20 Gardens for the City projects citywide ranging from a complete garden rebuild in the Bronx to greening school grounds in East Harlem to building raised garden beds to grow vegetables in Brooklyn, and many more. Countless New Yorkers in all five boroughs enjoy a respite from the city because of your generosity.

Many thanks to all our supporters for your work and contributions. Thanks also to our visionary founder Bette Midler, our dedicated Board and Chairman’s Council, our hard-working staff, dozens of community-based partners, residents who work hand-in-hand beside our staff, and elected officials of New York City and New York State.

Please see the report that follows for many examples of how your support for NYRP makes New York a safer, healthier, and happier city.

With appreciation,

Deborah Marton

OUR MISSION AND VISION

Nature is a fundamental right of every New Yorker. NYRP partners with local communities, public agencies, and the private sector to acquire, create, maintain, and program public open spaces. Our sustained partnership with communities promotes strong social ties and collective action.

We aspire to expand our footprint and impact in all five boroughs to make a safer, healthier, and happier city.
HERE IS HOW WE CREATE SAFER, HEALTHIER AND HAPPIER
SAFER COMMUNITIES

Safer because NYRP’s “Blue Shirts” and the communities we partner with ensure that neighborhood gardens and open spaces are available for all to enjoy. NYRP and its partners work as a force of stability - building, renovating, and activating green open space, educating children to be environmentally conscious, engaging communities through fitness programming, arts and culture workshops, community celebrations and sometimes we are there just to shovel snow and ice.

Safer because NYRP invests in and activates open space for everybody in New York City. Highbridge Park is home to two New York City Housing Authority developments, whose residents benefit from the removal of dangerous debris and the restoration of ecologically valuable and historically important green space.

Safer because our investments make communities more environmentally and socially resilient. We’re working to restore the Sherman Creek Park shoreline in Upper Manhattan to help control erosion caused by wave energy and global climate change, and have installed solar panels at a garden in Brooklyn to provide power and an off-the-grid resource in the event of a power outage.

HEALTHIER COMMUNITIES

Healthier because we improve human and environmental health holistically, from planting trees that sequester carbon, to bringing back native species, like the American Eel, through our restoration efforts.

Healthier because we help advance physical health in community gardens by offering fitness programming that includes yoga and dance. We also support our gardeners growing efforts. In 2017, NYRP gardeners grew 89,000 pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables... 89,000 pounds!!!

Healthier because our lot restoration efforts reduce crime and make people in the community feel safer. Essex Street Community Garden (pictured above) was full of garbage before being transformed into the lush bastion of neighborhood calm it is now.
HAPPIER COMMUNITIES

Happier because NYRP gardens provide a space for neighbors to gather. Every year at El Cataño Community Garden, people get together for an annual garden domino tournament, while art is an integral part of programming at gardens in every borough.

Happier because community gardens empower local residents and partners. Garden Group leaders like Reginald Germain (left) and Ana Torres (right) open the gardens in which they grow food and flowers, and coordinate other activities with neighbors.

Happier because community gardens promote equity. NYRP’s environmental education programs for K-8th grade students use parks and gardens as outdoor classrooms to provide hands-on learning experiences.

HISTORY AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Central to New York Restoration Project’s mission is creating a context for community to happen. Every space that NYRP adopts receives a range of services and physical improvements intended to provide beautiful, safe, clean, environmentally functional spaces. We believe this work is critical to the health of our city and its residents.

NYRP reclaims and restores spaces as a shared community resource and envisions a future where open space is an integral and essential right of every community, contributing to the health and well-being of all citizens. Some of our biggest achievements to date follow below:

- Co-led MillionTreesNYC with the New York City Parks Department, planting 250,000 of the million trees, and reaching our million tree goal two years ahead of schedule.
- Transformed four city parks – Ft Tryon, Ft Washington, Highbridge, and Sherman Creek. For example, we transformed Sherman Creek Park from a five-acre dumping ground on the Harlem River into an urban forest, a children’s garden, and a saltwater marsh.
- Acquired and run 52 community gardens in all five boroughs of New York City to save them from commercial development.
- Revitalized more than 400 acres of public land throughout New York City.
- Planted over 350,000 trees (including those 250,000 from MillionTreesNYC), 19,000 shrubs, 135,000 plants, and 56,000 bulbs throughout parks, community gardens, New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA) campuses, schools, and other public spaces citywide.
- Gave away 60,000 trees to New York City residents to plant on privately-owned land (back, side, and front yards).
- Renovated and upgraded over 40 community gardens in the least green and most economically depressed and underserved neighborhoods of New York City, meeting the needs expressed by community stakeholders.
- Educated more than 54,000 K-8th grade students about ecology, nutrition, and the environment using our community gardens and parks as outdoor classrooms.
- Entertained over 20,000 attendees of our arts, culture, and fitness programs.
- Engaged over 61,000 volunteers in community greening projects.
- Removed over five million pounds of trash (2,500 tons) from highways, abandoned lots, gardens, and parks.
- Diverted 950,000 pounds (475 tons) of food scraps from the waste stream through composting.
